- allege that treatment is necessary to prevent recurrence;
- agree to pay for the expenses of diagnosis and treatment, if financially able;
- stipulate to the admissibility and sufficiency of the facts in the police report;
- acknowledge the admissibility of the stipulated facts in any trial on the charged offense;
 and
- waive the rights to testify, have a speedy trial, call witnesses, present evidence, and have a jury trial.

A person charged with a non-felony traffic offense or certain offenses related to criminal mistreatment is not eligible for a deferred prosecution more than once.

House Bill Analysis - 1 - HB 2487

The petitioner must be evaluated by an approved treatment facility, which will submit a treatment plan to the court. If the court approves the plan and grants a deferred prosecution, the person will be ordered to undergo treatment in a two-year program. If a person fails to successfully complete the treatment program, the court must hold a hearing to determine whether to remove the person from the deferred prosecution and enter judgment on the charge. If the person successfully completes the program, the court must dismiss the charges three years after the successful completion of the program.

The court may order the person to pay costs incurred by the state in administering the deferred prosecution, up to a maximum of $150. If the person will not be able to pay the costs, the court may not order costs. The court must consider the person's financial resources in determining the amount and method of payment of costs.

Summary of Bill:

The maximum amount that a court may order a person to pay for administering a deferred prosecution is $500.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date: The bill takes effect 90 days after adjournment of the session in which the bill is passed.
